These materials are chosen to address a wide range of fractures and applications as well as to allow for the appropriate amount of rigidity and stability.

Intended use: External Fixation Devices are intended to be used for the fixation of supracondylar, or condylar fractures of the femur; for fusion of a joint; for surgical procedures that involve cutting the bone, for fixation of bone fractures; bone reconstruction; as a guide pin for insertion of other implants; or may be implanted through the skin so that a pulling force or traction may be applied to the skeletal system; and others may be used for fixation of bone fractures, for bone reconstructions, as a guide pin for insertion of other implants, or it may be implanted through the skin so that a pulling force (traction) may be applied to the skeletal system.

Indications statement:	Reprocessed external fixation devices are indicated for use in patients requiring external skeletal fixation and treatment of fractures, osteotomy, arthrodesis, correction of deformities, fracture revision, bone reconstruction procedures, limb lengthening, correction of bony or soft tissue deformities and segmental bony or soft tissue defects.
Technological characteristics:	The design, materials, and intended use of the Reprocessed External Fixation Devices are identical to the predicate devices. The mechanism of action of the Reprocessed External Fixation Device is identical to the predicate devices in that the same standard mechanical design, materials, shapes and sizes are utilized. There are no changes to the claims, intended use, clinical applications, patient population, performance specifications, or method of operation. The only change is the modified external fixation devices will be provided non-sterile. Sterilization of the devices will occur in the hospital prior to use.
